- b) Your talents, passions and values align with your life dreams and goals.
- c) Your family approves of the life goals that you share with them.
- d) Your path seems easy enough to accomplish and challenging enough to keep you enthusiastic.

5. Respond to the prompt below, using what we have discussed over the last few weeks:

a) Marta is your older sister and she has been accepted into a local college that your parents want her to go to. She's excited that she got in, but what she really wants to do is go to business school to start a nonprofit organization to help stop the drug problem in your community. She went through a very rough time in middle school and high school with drugs, and she wants to be a part of the solution. You just want your sister to be happy, and she comes to you for advice. You're the only one that she has told about her real passion. What advice would you give Marta and how can you support her?

6. Summarize how you can build legacy personally and possibly lead others to do so.

7) Explain what could happen if you choose to stay in a relationship (either with friends or BF/GF) that is not healthy for you, and what benefits you would have if you walked away from the relationship.

8) How can you have the greatest impact on your family, friends and community?
